NEWS...

A revised calendar and curriculum, known as the "4-1-4 program," will be instituted at Middlebury College in the 1968-68 academic year. The new program, consisting of somewhat shorter fall and spring terms and a five-week winter session of concentration on a single course or research project, will replace the traditional two semester system in effect at Middlebury since 1909.

Fall term classes will begin in September and will run for 13 weeks, with final examinations ending just before the Christmas holidays. The five-week winter session will run through the first week in February with the 13-week spring term scheduled from mid-February to mid-May. Commencement will be held a week earlier under the new calendar.

Students will elect four courses in the fall and spring terms instead of the customary five, and will undertake a single study project in the winter session. As a result, requirements for a baccalaureate degree will include 32 fall and spring courses and four winter courses in place of the 120 credit system.

The major change in the new curriculum is the winter session which provides students an opportunity to enroll in a single course from a wide range of new and experimental offerings. For the first time in their careers they will be able to devote their entire time and energy to a single project, free from conflicting demands of several courses.

Emphasis in the winter session will be on independent study such as individual research projects, seminars, dramatic or musical productions, specialized laboratory experiments and the completion of senior thesis or honors projects.

Several educational benefits will be derived from the new curriculum. The reduction of course loads from five to four in the fall and spring terms will give students the opportunity to spend more time on intensive study in each course than was possible under the growing burden of five electives. The winter session program will permit experimentation with interdisciplinary courses, new approaches in the basic disciplines and promote individual inquiry and independent study at an earlier stage of every student's program.

The Middlebury College Soccer Club participated in a history-making, seven country tour of Europe, including two stops behind the Iron Curtain.

Under the auspices of the People-to-People Sports Committee, the team played a 20-game schedule this summer against all-star university teams and top amateur clubs.

The team's stops in the Soviet Union and Poland were the first by a United States collegiate soccer team.

The Middlebury club, made up of Coach Joe Morone and 32 members of the College's varsity soccer team, left New York August 12th and visited Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Poland, France and the Soviet Union.

Construction work is under way on a new $2 million residential complex, designed to house nearly 250 students at Middlebury College when it is completed in January 1969.

The new stone and glass complex will include a six-story dormitory scheduled to house 132 men, another six-story unit to house 111 women, and a connecting central commons unit to provide study and lounge areas. The new buildings are being constructed of native Vermont limestone from the area, in keeping with the 35 other buildings on the Middlebury campus, and are located north of Pearsons Hall, on a height of land overlooking the Champlain Valley and the mountains. The resident units, which will provide 137 single rooms and 53 doubles, will be 130 x 40 feet and the connecting commons unit in the L-shaped structure will be 50 x 50 feet.

Work on this residential complex, which is part of a major expansion program at Middlebury, designed to increase student enrollment from 1,400 to 1,800 by 1975, boosts new construction at the College to a record $6 million. Other buildings nearing completion are the Music-Art Center and Phase I of the Science Center.
